Many people played an important role in the creation of the Community Health Scan Toolkit.

Yukon First Nation Health and Social Development Commission members, other health and social staff and the many other people who participated in the Community Health Scans helped us identify the areas to feature in this toolkit.

They gave us a great deal of information about the topics of interest to them. In addition, they told us about the types of resources and tools that would be of use to them.

The creation of this document was very much a team effort.

Several people took part in researching, writing, editing and making the final choices about the content of the Community Health Scan Toolkit.

The persons involved in this process were:

Yukon First Nation Health and Social Commission Members

Lori Duncan – Director of Health and Social Development (Council of Yukon First Nations)

Jen Jones – Aboriginal Health Transition Fund (AHTF) Manager

Valerie Laurie – Community Health Development Coordinator (AHTF)

Michael Cazon – Community Health Development Facilitator (AHTF)

Teresa Sidney – Aboriginal Health Human Resources Initiatives Coordinator (AHTF)

Antoinette Miller – Administrative Assistant (Council of Yukon First Nations)

Valerie Laurie oversaw all of the work for the toolkit.

Amanda Leslie of Mosaic Communications edited the document and played an integral role in the production and layout stage.

Several other people wrote sections in this toolkit.

Robin Round wrote the section on evaluations and the proposal fact sheet.

Debra Dupont wrote the briefing notes documents based upon material available on the Internet and Denise Beattie provided an example of a briefing note.

Content of the “Summary of the Culturally Relevant Holistic Health Planning Conference” was from a document written by the conference facilitators Michael and Judie Bopp and compiled by Michael Cazon.

Michael and Judie Bopp also wrote the health planning worksheets that are included in this toolkit.

The Fall School worksheets were produced by the Arctic Health Research Network-Yukon, the Centre for Health Promotion at the University of Toronto and the Council of Yukon First Nations.

Several people also shared existing lists of contact information and lists of accommodations near the hospitals and other resources for Section Five of this toolkit.

The individuals and facilities that provided resources for these lists include the following:

Krista Reid of the Yukon First Nations Health Programs at Whitehorse General Hospital; Debbie Urban – the Aboriginal Patient Liaison for several BC hospitals; Megan Knall of the Canadian Cancer Society – Alberta/NWT Division; Shahr Savizi of the Canadian Cancer Society in Calgary and Mya Kondor – the Cancer Care Navigator at Whitehorse General Hospital; Shakeri Farimah – Professional Practice Chief – Social Worker, Royal Columbian Hospital; Royal Alexander Pastoral Care; the Social Work Department, St. Paul's Hospital; and Lion's Gate Hospital Social Work Department. Some of this information was updated by Valerie Laurie.
